

Law School... Yes We Can (LSYWC) is seeking hard working high school seniors and current college students from diverse backgrounds who are interested in attending law school. LSYWC is the first "law school pipeline" program of its kind in Colorado, with the goal of increasing the diversity of students attending law school and entering the legal profession.

The program is designed to accompany students throughout their college career with a personalized curriculum and a team of mentors to help them succeed in college and develop competencies for law school and the admissions process, cultivate a professional network, and provide relevant work experience.
